FIFA 22 introduces “HyperMotion Technology,” which uses motion capture data collected from real-life players playing a complete, high-intensity football match in motion capture suits. The data collected from player movements, tackles, aerial duels and on-ball actions is used to power the game's gameplay. The team at EA SPORTS and its players have captured over 30 hours of real-time motion data to help create the most authentic and immersive experience on PlayStation 4. The players in this video are dressed in real-world equipment and wear the FIFA 22 motion capture suit which includes individual sensors in each shoe and reflective markers affixed to body segments to allow players to be tracked. The players are filmed in a variety of conditions and high-intensity football action. The data from their movements, tackles, aerial duels and on-ball actions is then applied to the game's gameplay, giving players the ability to fight for every ball, react to the opponent's attack, make tight dribbling moves and react to the ball moving away from them. Data from all 30 hours of real-world gameplay has been used to create a more balanced and responsive player model, new player animations and new AI controlled behaviours. FIFA 22 will launch on the PlayStation 4 worldwide on 10 August 2016. For more information on FIFA, visit www.fifa.com. Bill Stillwell, Senior Director of FIFA, commented: “Working with our teams on the MLS, featuring on-field data and in-depth analysis, our testers used every trick in the book to find ways to make FIFA even more authentic, exciting and responsive. We're all very excited to bring this to our fans with FIFA 22.” WebStart start up screen test for login page
