MULTILINGUAL-CRD.exe.Piers Morgan is sending a girl to prison, that's what he's really saying. Yes, the headline is just a joke and he's not going to send any girl to prison, but there's no question that Piers Morgan thinks he's the smartest, biggest celebrity in the country, and as such, people who think they're smarter than him deserve to be sent to prison. The British broadcaster was on the BBC's flagship Nine O'Clock News last night and was asked by Jonathan Dimbleby about what actions he'd like to see the government take to prevent the spread of knife crime. Here are his responses, courtesy of The Independent: "If we really want to stop the gangs, if we really want to do something about this, there's only one way and it is to send a message out there that there are consequences, to people who are gang leaders and gang members. But also to the general public, because a lot of people pick up gang culture and they become part of the gangs, and they end up selling drugs." This is a fairly damning indictment of people who are involved in gangs, because obviously they're much, much worse than the average human being. A young man involved in a gang isn't some idealized image. He's a violent criminal and bad company for his peers. Piers Morgan can't really say "Send them all to prison, but don't execute them" (which would be an awfully strange thing to say, when you think about it), but he's made it very clear that the government should ship these thugs off to one of those nice padded cells somewhere, where they can stay nice and safe, and don't have to engage in what he describes as "brutal, brutal, brutal lifestyles." Reasonable men would agree with this sentiment, but Piers Morgan doesn't seem to be reasonable. He's a big, shining star, and while he can't tell the government what to do, he can e79caf774b
