Working since early 2016 I have been a musician in multiple bands, most notably with The Volans (bandcamp.com/thevolans). In late 2017 I started a solo project as a composer and producer with which I am now recording and releasing my music. I mostly play synth instruments and piano and am mostly focused on music. I also do art and studies in psychology so if you like my music and want to have a dialogue don't hesitate to reach out! published:15 Mar 2019 views:5031

Curve started as a small forum in the early days of the internet. Now, the site is a humble repository for the best indie content there is. We believe that if there was no Curve, there would be no-one to be that cool in real life. You might think that doesn't sound quite right, but it's true. Because we're cool. We know what's best. Here are some other phrases you'll see on Curve: "These are the games. These are the videos. You know the drill." And also: "We do what you don't. We don't do what you do." Seen these on a screenshot somewhere? Of course you have: It's official Curvespeak And then there's: "We're cool." Who are we: Curve's editorial team is made up of writers, designers, artists, programmers and filmmakers who see the world differently. It's been a joy to share these differing worlds with all of you and we hope you enjoy the content as much as we do. For new content, exclusive interviews and more, subscribe to Curve on YouTube. Support Curve for free and get cool prizes for uploading the best content on our forums. --- Welcome to Big Ed's Game Emporium! Do you love games? So do we.

We've got everything you need for your favourite hobby, from tabletop games to computer games and everything in between. You can even get a tattoo of a game on your thigh. They come with instructions, so you can't mess it up. And what about the stories behind the games? Should you care? Well, some stories are true, some are false. That's the art of the game. Some stories are good, some are bad.

You don't have to believe them. --- We love games, games that give us a reason to

What's new in The Indie Mixtape:

: Fall Out Boy releases Something Real as the band returns to the start of its discography 15 September 2012 If you visit The Flaming Lips website or the new album at Amazon then you will be greeted by a particularly depressing animated video: a muscular bear is walking around in a forest, gasping for breath as it defies tiredness, pain, heat and fire. Viewers are invited to drop apple pies on the soft target of this bear's head so long as their pies, by association, don't register on the deafening beep of the bear's little heartbeat and to drop things is to be helped by, apparently, recovery. I guess the point of the video is to eat pies, become sick, and eat more pies. Or, if pie is German, eat cake and pears and fall asleep. 'Yum'. Anyway, the video aptly sums up the current state of the band. Perhaps more accurately it sums up a decade during which Fall Out Boy have been the winningest band on earth, casting their eyes over their career and not just the recent extension of it. Their first album, a 10-song EP called Take This To Your Grave, was released in 2001. The Modern Pope, with its bright production and anthemic feel -- 'Save Rock and Roll', 'Sugar, We're Goin Down' -- was released three years later, a challenge for both the band and the label on radio. Fall Out Boy's subsequent output has been littered with warnings and cautionary tones ('The Noamping', 'New York State of Mind', 'Thriller', 'This Ain't A Scene, It's An Arms Race', 'People Are Corny (That's what they say)', 'Sugar, We're Goin Down', etc.), nods to its audience ("New days, old ways") and a half-hearted attempt at cashing in on pop culture ("The William Tell Overture (Save Me, Johnny), Kerrang!"). In the meantime, they became one of the world's most successful bands. To be fair, they have done an impressive job. After the release of The Singles the band expanded, distributing hits like 'Dance, Dance, Dance (The Au Revoir Song)' and 'This Ain't A Scene, It's An Arms Race', consolidating its hugely successful fame in a manner that keeps the ball rolling with fans though it hasn't been recreated in a long time. While they may act as cautions
