"She's amazing and welcoming and she has all the gears of hospitality." While she was impressed with the book's connection to the community, Hofer said he was somewhat disappointed it didn't have more of a focus on local food. "I think it would be a lot more fun to see the U.S. go to Tuscany, Italy, and they take you to all of these amazing restaurants and you eat all of the food," he said. "I think it would make it a lot more popular and more interesting and we have so much great food here, I feel like it would be a much better book." One of the ways people can keep up with the book's progress is through its Facebook page. Celis made a calendar of events for the book, which is where you'll find things like a book reading by Wisconsin native and author of "Back in the Saddle" and "Cattlemen's Bloc," Seamus McCaulay on April 17 at River Falls Elks Lodge. "It makes me feel good to know that I can make my community know about something that will make a difference for them," she said. "I want to try to educate people and get people talking about it. I can feel the excitement and the response in people's comments and private messages on Facebook. I want to keep it going." As for Celis and the book's impact on the community, she said it's been a thrill to see people's responses.
