Q: Accessing Python 2.5 from Python 3 (Py2.5) with 'from foo import *' I have an old Python script that uses Python 2.5 from the command line (i.e., I just import the module and run the script from the command line). Now I am moving to Python 3, but I do not want to simply import the module to Python 3 and run the script. If I simply import the module, Python 2.5 will use my Python 2.5 modules. I want to use the Python 3 modules. What is the best way to do this? A: Use the from __future__ import __version__ to avoid importing the old 2.5. (See PEP 291 for all the details.) A: Use from __future__ import unicode_literals to hide variables that weren't known back in Python 2.x. That's the simplest way. The rest of the code should work with little or no change. Topical application of methyl chloroformate-induced syngeneic mice. I. Characterization of a topical contact sensitizing agent. Methyl chloroformate (MCF) was used as a potential sensitizer for the ear-swab test. Physicochemical properties of MCF were examined by the following in vitro methods: (1) gas-chromatography analysis, (2) a cytotoxicity test, (3) a protein staining, and (4) a reaction with CO2. MCF appeared to be a protein-reactive compound as measured with all of the above assays, but no reaction was observed with GC analysis. MCF sensitization of the skin in mice was found to be contact sensitizer by the ear-swab test. Apparent necrosis was observed at the site of application, although the extent of necrosis was found to be less than that of contact sensitization by the positive control, 4-ethoxymethylene-2-phenyl-2-oxazoline-5-one (EPOZ). Histological changes, such as edema, proliferation of the epidermis and immune cells, were observed at the site of MCF application. The results of the present study suggest that MCF is a contact sensitizer which shares some properties of EPOZ, although, in the case of MCF, the evaluation of contact sensit

Q: Can I set the color of the mouse's outline when using sunburn? I am using the sunburn addon to highlight text on images. This works well, except that the outline for the mouse while pressing the "star" cursor button looks very weird. It is a dark blue color, but it is highly inconsistent. Can I set the outline color for the buttons to something more consistent? This is not a major issue as it does not distract from the functionality of the addon, but it would be nice to have it look the same every time. A: This is a known bug, and is now fixed.
